Weekly Market Update

Primary market environment: Macroeconomic risks continue to dominate the picture. First and foremost is the development of the gas price. In addition, there are concerns about the economy, inflation and growth, rising interest rates and a political crisis in Italy (Eurosceptics are ahead), to name but a few. The Fed is signalling further increases in interest rates.

Primary market barometer

SSA

The supposed summer break was interrupted this week. Inflation fears ensured very good demand for SSAs. In particular, securities issued by the German federal states are very popular with investors.

Covered Bonds

Covered bonds remain in demand, not only as safe haven assets. On the one hand, purchases by central banks have increased again (partly by replacing upcoming maturities), and on the other hand, foreign market participants also seem to be stepping up their purchases.

Senior Unsecured

On the primary market for senior unsecured bank bonds, there continue to be virtually no transactions. The difficult market environment is compounded by the blackout period due to the reporting season for Q2 2022 and the upcoming summer break.

SSA

In the SSA segment, supply was limited to a few issues this week. The state of Berlin issued a 10-year EUR 500 million (no grow) state treasury note, which enjoyed particularly high demand due to the scarcity of new federal state issues. Given that the issue was oversubscribed by a factor of six, it was priced 2 bps tighter at MS - 10 bps compared to the initial spread target (MS - 8 bps). In our estimation, this corresponds to a negative new issue premium of 1 bp. The marketing of the 10-year green NRW.Bank transaction was also successful. Orders clearly exceeded the issue volume, which was limited to EUR 1 billion (> EUR 3.8 billion). The final spread was MS -7 bps, 2 bps below the original indication of MS -5 bps: Should a favourable window of opportunity open up, issuers can be expected to take advantage of such opportunities, even though the official pipeline is currently still empty.

Covered Bonds

After the market for covered bonds had to endure a difficult phase, which was characterised by weak subscription rates, rising new issue premiums and a widening of spreads, the revival of market activity, which had already become apparent in the previous week, continued recently. Actually, a pronounced summer break was expected from many sides. This was mainly due to the central bank, which, with a view to the covered

"The stabilisation in swap valuations in the cash that has been observed for some time continues and is gaining momentum! Spreads are narrowing across the bank. The only plausible explanation consists of two components: 1. currently there is little supply pressure from the primary markets, 2. covered bonds seem to have a safe haven status among some market participants. It is therefore not surprising that core names in particular, especially German and increasingly French securities, are more sought after. Also significant: Recently, almost all enquiries to us have been characterised by the intention to buy".

bond maturities in September (EUR 6.8 billion), was already acting increasingly on the buying side. Foreign counterparties also showed increasing demand. Safe haven aspects continue to play a role at present, in view of a colourful potpourri of negative factors. In this respect, it is not surprising that the constructive picture is also radiating to the long end of the curve: quotations have become friendlier again, coming from high levels. The recent success of the NordLB placement shows how much the sentiment has changed. The covered bond with a maturity of 3.25 years and a volume of EUR 500 million (no grow) was 4 times oversubscribed and was ultimately priced at MS +3 bp. The marketing spread was initially MS +8 bp. This underpins the impression that the interest in German counterparties, which has recently increased again, is continuing. The picture is different in Italy. While the spreads of the other peripheral countries tightened somewhat, they widened there in view of the political crisis in the country. In this context, it will be interesting to see whether and how the ECB will use the "anti-fragmentation tool" (TPI - Transmission Protection Instrument). Since there are a lot of open questions regarding the design of the TPI, the adjusted reinvestment within the framework of PEPP maturities is likely to be the first "line of defence" against spread widening.

Outlook: The pipeline for the coming week is currently empty. If issuance windows open, one or the other issuer could show up. However, as August and with it the peak of the summer break is just around the corner and many issuers have their hands tied by the current reporting season, market activity is likely to remain limited overall.

Senior Unsecured

The primary market for senior unsecured bank bonds continues to show little activity. The Canadian sector leader Toronto-Dominion Bank took advantage of the positive momentum at the beginning of the week to place a non-preferred dual tranche in EUR benchmark format. The volume placed was 1 bn EUR with a 5-year maturity (ISIN XS2511301322) and 1.25 bn EUR with a 10-year maturity (ISIN XS2511309903). The transaction was solidly oversubscribed at new issue premiums of 35 and 25 bps, respectively. In the secondary market so far, the spreads of the bonds have narrowed slightly from their issue levels.

In the case of the EUR 500 million, 3-year green preferred senior bond priced by Aareal Bank last week at a yield of 4.6% (ISIN DE000AAR0355), the ASW spread narrowed further to 235 bps, compared with 300 bps at issuance.

In addition to the overall difficult market environment, reasons for the almost lifeless primary market in this segment include the vacation season and the blackout period due to the ongoing Q2 2022 reporting season.

The quarterly reporting season for banks has been mixed so far. As expected, profits have fallen significantly compared with the previous year, with trading profit in particular being impacted by falling bond valuations. While the banks were able to release some of the overlay provisions for credit risks formed during the COVID crisis, some of them are rededicating corresponding items to provisions for increasing recession risks. On the other hand, rising interest margins in the changed interest rate environment and continued very solid credit growth are supporting profits. Overall, the results of the banks have thus been surprisingly solid so far, although some banks are talking about a gloomier outlook for the rest of the year. Deutsche Bank CEO Christian Sewing, for example, said: "The months ahead will continue to be challenging. There is reason to believe that things will become even more difficult economically."

“Despite the recent return of recession fears, the cash register performed well last week. French stocks in particular are top performers. The coalition breakup in Italy leaves Italian spreads the only ones to widen on a weekly basis. The cash market continues to be illiquid. Screen prices are still vague indications at most. There has been little change in the capital flows of the past weeks: Asset managers remained on the sidelines, watching the headline-driven action. The risk of being caught on the wrong foot seems too great. ETF funds provided most of the turnover in smaller lot sizes. Initially, they were buyers, but since midday Tuesday, they have been sellers again.”

Short news

7/27 ECB - Monetary developments in the euro area June 2022: How did euro area bank lending and money supply evolve in June? How do they compare with May's figures? The European Central Bank (ECB) answered these questions in its latest statistical press release.

7/27 FED rate hike: As expected, the U.S. Federal Reserve moved the key interest rate band up by 75 bps to 2.25-2.50%. In the accompanying statement, the FOMC noted that economic momentum had slowed, but the labor market remained robust. In addition, inflation remains elevated, and so FOMC members expect further rate hikes to be appropriate, they said.

7/26 SRB's MREL dashboard for Q1/22 published: The Single Resolution Board (SRB) has published its minimum requirement for own funds and eligible liabilities (MREL) dashboard for Q1/2022. "I am pleased, that despite the current economic uncertainty, banks continue to make progress in building up their levels of MREL. This is important funding that acts as a shock absorber in a time of crisis, and helps to ensure that the preferred strategy for dealing with a bank in trouble is available, and workable, at short notice," said SRB Chair Elke König.

7/22 Supervisor to review banks' capital plans: According to Börsenzeitung, the European banking supervisory authority is getting serious about its recently announced review of the capital plans of major banks in the euro area. Having recently called for the consideration of adverse macroeconomic scenarios as a result of the Ukraine war, the supervisory authority is now likely to review these capital plans.

7/22 The ECB is finally sending a clear message according to BdB: "By raising the key interest rate by 50 basis points, the ECB is resolutely counteracting inflation," said Christian Ossig, Chief Executive of the Association of German Banks \(BdB\), with a view to the ECB Council meeting.

7/22: Spain's economy minister keeps bank tax in the dark: Spain's economy ministry declined to give details of a new tax on banks' profits, which are set for a boost as interest rates rise to tame inflation. Economy Minister Nadia Calvino told reporters the tax would be introduced to parliament this week but declined to give any information about its design. Sources heard by Reuters said the government was readying a levy of just under 5% on net interest income and banking commissions.

Leisure tip for the weekend: CRAFT Festival in Frankfurt/Main

After a two-year break, the CRAFT Festival will take place again in Frankfurt am Main on July 29 and 30, 2022. Besides Craft Beer, the festival will offer wine, spirits and street food. In addition to the winemakers and breweries, hand-crafted products will be offered. The festival will take place at the large meadow at the Stadionbad (directly in front of the Deutsche Bank Park). Unlike the other years, this year will be a pure open-air version of the festival. A one-day ticket costs 12 euros in presale, the price for a combined ticket for both days is 20 euros (also in presale).
